“ Duncan was always a gentleman and a mensch (Yiddish word for man with integrity)- and he always had a smile on his face and was upbeat. I sat on the Lower Merion Civil Service Commission with him for 23 years and he was out stalwart secretary, loved taking notes of the meetings, and always cared for our hard working police department. He always was more concerned for others than himself, and always asked about my family. We will miss him.

“ Dear Libby,
I want you to know how sad I was to hear of Duncan's death. He was always a good friend to me, offering a helping hand wherever possible. He gave me much appreciated and sage advice as I was finding my way through Princeton, Jefferson, the Penn Medical System, and medicine in general throughout the Philadelphia area. He was always positive, encouraging, and enthusiastic while also being truthful. He was one of the most kind and caring individuals I've ever met. He was definitely the jolliest Santa Claus I ever encountered. I will miss him greatly.

“ Duncan Wheelen Van Dusen

What an extraordinary individual, what an extraordinary life! I have never met a more selfless individual with good will towards all, modest, self-effacing who treated everyone as equal. His principle in life to the very end was to be useful in service to his country, to his family and to his fellow man. One can't even begin to assess the incredible number of lives he touched. He became part of the lives of those who met him and got to know him. He loved all and they in turn loved him, admired him and respected him.

In the last years of his life his health began failing and he went through unspeakable suffering. But he was incredibly stoic and there was never a word of self-pity or complaint. Duncan had incredible spiritual and physical strength and even when one knew how ill he was, one was certain he would overcome all. Thus, it was an enormous shock to hear that he no longer is among us. Duncan was fortunate to have his dear Libby share his life, a true pillar of strength for him who shared his suffering, cared and supported him to the bitter end.

Duncan's life, a life well lived, ought to be celebrated. But, those who knew him and loved him share this enormous loss with his family. He leaves a tremendous void no one can fill, for Duncan was unique in every aspect imaginable. It is hard to imagine a world without him and he will be greatly missed.

May Duncan's noble soul rest in peace with the Angels.

“ Duncan was one of the first people in our neighborhood that we met when moving to Bryn Mawr in 1971. A mutual friend and neighbor asked several other neighbors in for dinner to meet us. Duncan was a memorable guest and remained a great cheerleader to me and my family ever afterwards. He actually stayed and helped our hostess do all the dishes after the welcome dinner was over, which was unusual for a man at that time! I will miss his faithful presence at church and at Harriton House meetings. He always had a smile, and cheery greeting no matter how debilitating his adversity. My condolences to Libby who lovingly looked after him so diligently. Jenny Kirkpatrick
