“ I know this comes really late, but John and I were close friends at the Short Hills School and later at Millburn Junior and Senior High Schools (I always knew him as Kelly). I did not learn of his passing until last night, when checking the status of MHS alumni and was very sad to read this. John and I hung out quite a bit during our younger days. I was not the least bit surprised to read that he gone to Wharton and then got an MBA from NWU.

Again, I am very sorry to learn of this and want his family to know how sorry I am about this. John was one person whom I really would have been happy to speak with at a reunion, as I have so many good memories of him.

I am Alexander "Sandy" Cameron, John's brother, and he was a great brother to me. He saw me through some very difficult times with more wisdom than his older brother seemed to have at the time. I loved his sense of humor, and especially his sardonic wit, but I think that is a Cameron trait. I will never forgive him however for joining St. Anthony Hall, because I was St.Elmo at U Penn, next door, so he joined our rival! Thank you all for the thoughtful comments and I will miss him greatly.

*It's some nearly 6 years of "Commander's" passing and while I had heard of his sudden passing, due to speaking of him only yesterday when reminiscing with a 1982 classmate, my heart filled with such gratitude for having known him. He and Bobbie used to come to my ancestral home on Martha's Vineyard and spend a week or two. It was always such fun to sit with the two of them while Commander grilled HUGE cuts of meat and fish and have a few rather sizable cocktails and chat well past sunset. At St. Anthony Hall at UPenn, Kelly was our resident scribe who would at our meetings provide a brilliant, sharp witted and penned hilarious, sarcastic roast of all members who had participated in any series of frat "events" that had been of note. What a great guy... and all these years later, it's as if I laughed with him yesterday. My condolences to you all for the pain you must still endure as this larger than life character's shadow was cast far and wide, leaving smiles for all who knew him!
