“ When I first came to the U.S. from New Zealand back in 2010 and found the B.O.C.C, Alfred and I shared a common interest in the art of leg spin bowling, which he was apparently very proficient at in his prime. He encouraged me to develop a variation that instead of spinning from leg to off, would go straight on to either hit the wickets or get an LBW. In addition to strolling the boundary on game day, you could often find him at practice standing behind the bowling crease passing on small words of wisdom. My condolences, he was a great man, and the continuation of the BOCC is a testament to his influence.
