While there she attended the Shipley school. After the war she returned to New York, graduating from the Brearley School in 1950. She then attended Bryn Mawr college from 1950 to 1952. She married Richard Storey, Jr. in 1952, making her home initially in Cambridge Mass and then in Sewickley Pa. In 1958, they moved to Lake Forest Ill. and then into the city of Chicago in 1961. The family returned to the Philadelphia area in 1972.

She retired in 1993 as a Vice President and senior officer in the private banking department. In retirement, Maisie was active in resident affairs at Waverly as well as alumnae affairs on behalf of Brearley and Bryn Mawr

She was a long-time summer resident of Mount Desert Island. From the time she was little girl she spent summers on the island first in her grandmother's house in Bar Harbor and then in Northeast Harbor. She was an active sailor and climber, and she loved the island.

She was an avid gardener, a devoted wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, and a blessing to all who knew her.
